SOUTHEAST CONFERENCE, UNITED CHURCH OF CHRIST

May 1, 2021

Cultural Humility vs Cultural Competence

Grace to you and peace! I was in a recent conversation about Cultural Humility vs Cultural Competence. You may be familiar with this distinction. The latter is based on the idea that we can learn about another culture and can become knowledgeable and competent. Cultural Humility is recognizing that we cannot know everything about another culture and requires life-long learning.

We often think of culture as an ethnic or racial culture. However, we all exist in many cultures or social groups. Such groups have their own sets of norms, customs, and understandings. Such cultures may reflect race, ethnicity, geography, age, straight/LGBTQ identity, political party, urban/rural settings, and many more.

We can learn about some aspects of different cultures such as language, food, festivals, music and dances. But there are deeper aspects of cultures that are more subtle – body language, concepts of fairness and justice, attitudes toward authority, approaches to decision-making, communication styles, etc.

Cultural humility requires life-long learning as well as critical self-reflection. It requires asking questions of others to understand their perspective and not assume that we know what it is. It also means recognizing and challenging power imbalances in order to create respect for other cultures. Cultural humility challenges our tendency toward stereotypes.

Given the diversity of the Southeast Conference and acknowledging that many of us have actually moved from other parts of the country (or Conference), approaching each other with a sense of cultural humility will deepen our relationships and strengthen the ministry we do together. A key element to remember is that it requires openness to life-long learning – which is both rewarding and exciting since we are all created in the image of God!

Blessings, Char Burch

Support new Faith Communities in the Southeast Conference!

The Strengthen the Church (STC) Offering reflects the shared commitment of people across the United Church of Christ to cooperatively build up the UCC. Conferences and the national setting equally share the gifts given by members and friends through their local congregations. Nationally, the funds raised support leadership development, new churches, youth ministry, and innovation in existing congregations. Within the Southeast Conference, this year's dollars will support our new Faith Communities! By your generosity to this offering, you build up the Body of Christ. Order resources at no cost: <https://www.uccresources.com/products/strengthen-the-church-offering-2021>. The offering is often taken on Pentecost: May 23.

Trainings and Conferences

Convergence Presents: Courageous Church Summit

May 10-14 - 22 speakers

Faith leaders stand at a crossroads in North America today. As people of faith and moral consciousness, we can either sit idly by and allow hate, greed, and fear to define us or we can channel the heart of our tradition and speak truth to greedy power, love to angry hate, and hope to unfounded fear. The Courageous Church Summit provides a critical look at where we are now and how we get to a more sustainable and equitable future. Through interviews with influential North American faith leaders in activist-oriented congregations, the Courageous Church Summit equips virtual leaders with the audacity, connections, and practical advice to be active leaders in an emerging movement for change.
